Teaching the Holocaust in Middle School Civics Classrooms

In this webinar, a panel of Holocaust and civics curriculum experts will demonstrate two completed lessons as part of a 10-lesson civics curriculum utilizing the Holocaust as its core content focus. The full suite of lessons will become available mid-summer in time for fall planning. This curriculum represents a unique opportunity to apply Holocaust content when teaching civics using active and engaged pedagogies. Each one-or-two-day lesson coheres to the Florida middle school civics exam specifications and will include six sample multiple choice items for classroom instruction and assessment.

These lessons may be included in college-level social studies education courses and may be modified for middle and high school world history, U.S. history and U.S. government courses.

This Holocaust-civics curriculum supports efforts to remember the lessons of the Holocaust and apply those lessons in a contemporary educational context.
