

The Bill of Rights

1

Citizens have freedom of speech and religion, can assemble, petition the government, or publish information.

6

Citizens have the right to a fast public trial, including a lawyer and jury.

2

Citizens have the right to bear arms.

7

Citizens have the right to a jury in a civil case (between citizens) when the cost is above a certain amount.

3

During war, soldiers can only stay in someone else's house with their permission.

8

Citizens are protected from being charged too much in fines or from being treated unfairly as punishment for a crime.

4

Someone's property cannot be searched or taken from them without reason.

9

There may be other rights not listed in the Constitution that belong to the people.

5

Citizens being accused of crimes have certain protections.

10

The Constitution gives some powers to the national government. Powers not listed belong to the states.
