

Sample Answers Executive Branch

Six Roles of the President

Head of State (symbol of U.S.); Commander in Chief (in charge of military); Chief Executive (boss of the branch); Agenda Setter (influences legislation and policy); Keeper of the Economy (held responsible for economy); Party Chief (top of party-helps others with elections)

I think the Commander in Chief role is the most important for the president because it controls all of the military branches and that is what protects people, both in foreign and domestic issues.

Complete the chart below during your Gallery Walk.

Topic	Summary in your own words	Picture
Impeachment Process	If the president does something against what he should be doing in his role, he/she is held accountable for their actions
Appointments	When the president picks someone to join his team
Executive Order	An order from the president that must be followed like a law
Veto	If the president does not agree with the proposed legislation, he can say "no"

"Photo hand holding the letter x" by rawpixel is licensed under the Freepik license

"Illustration conceptual of human resources management" by macrovector is licensed under the Freepik license

"vector legal statement, court notice, judge decision" by vectorjuice is licensed under the Freepik license

"Free photo 3d render of red paper clipboard with cross mark" by upklyak is licensed under the Freepik license