

Congress passes a law raising taxes	The President offers aid to another country suffering in the aftermath of an earthquake	The Department of the Interior opens a new national park
FOREIGN	The Department of Education requires a new test to monitor how students are learning	The President and Congress create a treaty with another nation, promising we don't attack each other
The Environmental Protection Agency directs the cleanup of a nearby wetland that is severely polluted	The President and Congress enter into an alliance with other nations, where we pledge to defend each other if attacked	Several nations including the U.S. provide soldiers to restore the peace between two warring nations
The nation is attacked, and the President, in his role as Commander-in-Chief, uses the U.S. military to defend the country	The Department of Justice enforces federal law by prosecuting criminals and sending them to prison	DOMESTIC

Adapted from iCivics:

<http://www.icivics.org/teachers/lesson-plans/foreign-policy-war-peace-and-everything-between>